Final assessment - oral exam

Learning outcomes:

The aim of the course is to acquaint students with the essence of the theory of applied linguistics and with the possibilities of subsequent practical application of the acquired knowledge. Applied linguistics as a "theoretical and empirical study of real-world problems in which language is a central issue" (Brumfit 1995: 27) is related to academic areas such as contrastive linguistics, conversational analysis, second language acquisition, sociolinguistics, psycholinguistics, pragmatics, forensic linguistics, translations, etc. Applied linguistics also deals with current social issues of culture, ethnic origin, gender, identity, aging and migration. Students will be able to use linguistic knowledge when analysing the function of many other areas of the human society that do not seem to be related to language and linguistics at first sight.

Brief outline of the course:

Applied and "pure" linguistics: history, development and current state of the art. Interdisciplinary areas: Language policy and planning - Business communication - Translation and interpretation - Lexicography - Media - Medical communication - Forensic linguistics - Second language acquisition - Language technology and teaching - English for academic purposes - Language socialization - Gender - Ethnicity - Sign languages - World English - Multilingualism - Discourse analysis - Neurolinguistics - Psycholinguistics - Sociolinguistics - Linguistic ethnography - Corpus linguistics - Cognitive linguistics - System-functional linguistics - Pragmatics
