C) Active participation during the seminar (max. number of points is 10, the required number is 1). To proceed to the final exam, it is necessary to obtain more than half of the total points that can be gained during the semester (note that a minimum number of points for activities A, B and C should be fulfilled as listed above). The final exam is in a written form. A student can get a maximum of 60 points. To pass, a student needs to obtain 31 and more points (note that credits will not be awarded to a student who gets less than 31 points from the final exam and whose sum of points obtained during the semester and the final exam is less than 51). The final mark is created by adding the points that the student gained during the semester and the final exam. In addition, the course also emphasizes the ability to properly understand this knowledge and apply it. For this purpose, the course provides not only an overview of the main theories of selected cognitive processes and the broader context of the discipline but also practice: practical illustrations and systematic encouragement of critical thinking. The main goal of seminars is to train the ability to use and adequately present the acquired knowledge, connect this knowledge to other related areas, think about it independently, discuss it critically and, last but not least, to flexibly and creatively solve various related model activities.

Knowledge: Students will gain an overview of the history and development of cognitive psychology, including major theories and models. They will acquire knowledge about cognitive processes such as perception, attention, memory, learning, thinking, and language. They will be familiar with the main paradigms of thinking about these cognitive processes and the research methods used in cognitive psychology.

Abilities: Students will develop the ability to think about cognitive processes within the framework of selected theoretical models. They will be able to apply cognitive psychology theories to real-life situations and problems. They will gain the skill to design and conduct experiments to investigate cognitive processes. Students can build upon the acquired abilities and further develop them in subsequent courses.

Skills

Students will be able to use the principles of cognitive psychology to solve practical problems. They will understand optimally functioning cognitive processes as well as their natural limits and will be able to effectively communicate concepts and research findings in the field of cognitive psychology. They will be prepared to critically follow current developments and research in cognitive psychology.

Prerequisites:
Conditions for course completion: Rating. Maximum 40 points during the semester - students' active approach to fulfilling their study obligations, independent work with texts in the library, active work at seminars. Processing of a partial task in the form of a seminar paper (5-8 standard A4 pages), in compliance with the citation standard KF FF UPJŠ. Information is updated annually on the subject's electronic bulletin board in AIS2, or alternatively in MS Teams.
Learning outcomes: Students will gain a deeper understanding of the history of philosophy and modern times in the context of the history of philosophy. The peculiarity of the philosophy of Leibniz (one of the creators of modern society) is a departure from modern thinking, which wants to cut off medieval and scholastic ways of thinking separately. Leibniz finds possibilities in the context of dealing with medieval culture for its creative reworking and returning to the sources of ancient thought, especially to its peak period (classical Greek philosophy), in order to formulate the basic problems of the further development of European thought. The aim is to draw attention to the importance of studying the works of philosophers (Leibniz in particular) and through them to try to return and rethink some questions of philosophy.
Brief outline of the course: Leibniz and new thinking. God - soul - world as basic issues of philosophical reflection of Leibniz. Meditations as a way of Leibniz's thinking about basic issues of philosophy and science, but also freedom of a man. Four pillars of European culture. Freedom and happiness as fundamental topics of reflections of new philosophers.

Course ID: KF/DAT/22	Course name: M. Foucault: Discipline and Punish
Course type, scope and the method: Course type: Practice Recommended course-load (hours): Per week: 2 Per study period: 28 Course method: present
Number of ECTS credits: 3
Recommended semester/trimester of the course: 6.
Course level: I.
Prerequisites:
Conditions for course completion: Conditions of continuous control: during the semester a student is continuously assessed according to his/her activity in seminars. To be awarded the credits for semester, a student must attend seminars. Assessment of students in seminars is conditioned by receiving the respective number of points (1 point for each active participation). Reading and understanding of the assigned texts can be checked during the seminars.
Learning outcomes: The aim of the course is to present philosophical thinking of the “Professor of the History of Systems of Thought”, genealogist and (although he did not like this description) post-structuralist thinker M. Foucault. Students have a chance to become familiar with (postmodern) genealogical understanding of history as the critique of ideologies that support (traditional) history. On the basis of Foucault’s analysis of establishment of prison and the related developing punishment practices, the seminar in written discourse attempts to draw the attention to the controversial points of our (optimistic) historical understanding of progressive ideas.
