Prerequisites:
Conditions for course completion: Participation in classes in accordance with the study regulations and the instructor's instructions. (2 absences without compensation or 3 with compensation are allowed – requiring either 1 additional seminar paper or 1 additional media output). Activity during the seminar. Completion of ongoing seminar assignments (preparation and interpretation of digital communications). Students will continuously publish their seminar assignments on their own webpage (blog). In order to be assessed, the student must have all required assignments published on their page. * During distance learning, active participation in seminars primarily means completing seminar tasks. Students may register for the exam on several dates throughout the entire examination period (typically at least once per week during the exam period). The default form of examination is written, but the student may request an oral examination (individual or colloquium-based). The exam session for the entire group (including administrative procedures) does not exceed 2 hours. The examination of an individual student lasts approximately 30 minutes in both written and oral forms. Assessment focuses primarily on the quality of argumentation. Students will become familiar with various exam formats during in-person instruction. Ongoing communication within the course takes place in the course group via the MS Teams application.
Learning outcomes: 1. Knowledge: During continuous and final assessment, the student demonstrates an adequate mastery of the course content standard defined by the required literature, and demonstrates mastery of the performance standard, within which the student, after completing the course, is able to pose problem-oriented questions (i.e., formulate scientific problems) arising from the nature of the digital form of new communication media. 2. Skills: The student will understand the essence of digital communication, especially in the context of its interactive, immersive, and hypertextual characteristics.

3. Professional competencies: The student will practically develop skills in creating texts adapted to modern communication technologies and will be able to modify their work based on the different ways digital texts are perceived.
4. Transferable competencies: The student will be able to apply acquired knowledge in various situations and, when working with primary and secondary sources, will be able to use, verify, and interpret acquired knowledge in a methodologically and ethically sound manner, structure the results of their study, and formulate their own conclusions.

COURSE INFORMATION LETTER

University: P. J. Šafárik University in Košice
Faculty: Faculty of Arts
Course ID: KF/ DFIL/15	Course name: History of Philosophy
Course type, scope and the method: Course type: Lecture / Practice Recommended course-load (hours): Per week: 1 / 1 Per study period: 14 / 14 Course method: present
Number of ECTS credits: 3
Recommended semester/trimester of the course: 1.
Course level: I.
Prerequisites:
Conditions for course completion: Conditions of continuous control and assessment: during the semester, the student is continuously controlled during the lectures, as long as the teaching is carried out in the classical form - face-to-face. If the teaching will be carried out differently - a distance form of teaching due to COVID-19, then the student will have assigned tasks for independent study of literature - philosophical texts, independent processing, (e.g. 2 sub-tasks - seminar papers) within the set deadline and preparation of the final seminar paper . The condition for registering for the exam is to pass a written test on the basic problems that are connected with the development of philosophical thinking from Thales to Nietzsche. Exam conditions: in the case of face-to-face teaching - only after successfully passing the final knowledge test, the student can take a written exam. In the case of distance learning - the student must complete a project - a final seminar paper - on which the student worked independently for the entire semester. During the semester, he handed in 2 partial outputs - seminar theses, where he demonstrates independent work with philosophical texts and tries to interpret them on his own while observing the bibliographic standard for seminar theses valid at KF FF UPJŠ in Košice.
Learning outcomes: The student is familiar with the basic problems of the history of philosophy from Thales to Nietzsche. The discipline presents an overview of more specialized philosophical topics and works that influenced the development of disciplines such as psychology and social work. The student acquires the basic terminology from philosophy, and acquires knowledge from philosophy through the history of philosophy - by studying source texts from various periods of the history of philosophy in relation to the discipline of his field of study.
Brief outline of the course: Ancient philosophy - the origin and development of ancient Greek philosophy • Classical Greek philosophy • Hellenistic philosophy • Medieval philosophy – origin and formation • Renaissance philosophy • Modern philosophy – founders and great systems • Modern empiric-sensualist philosophy • French Enlightenment philosophy • German classical philosophy • Philosophy 19th century after Hegel.
